

USF Engineering Students take a field trip to Kennedy Space Center

As part of the Introduction to Bioastronautics course developed by Assistant Research Professor Dr. Stephanie Carey, engineering students visited the Kennedy Space Center in April. The trip included private tours of Swamp Works, the Applied Physics Laboratory, the Vehicle Assembly Building and the launch pads. NASA researchers spoke about engineering opportunities as well as current and future space related technologies.

Students showing their "Go Bulls" pride at the launch pad

